The Latest Aspect of the New Charter Movements.

Governor Tilden Desires a General Law.

A "Grace, Mercy and Peace" Convention Held.

THE INSPECTOR OF PUBLIC WORKS' BILL.

ALBANY, April 8, 1875. The discussion on the New York Charter bill, preng upon the House so adroitly on Tuesday continues to occupy the attention of legislators here. There is a marked change, however, In the loud boasting of friends of the measure as to ultimate success. The temporary flush of victory, as exhibited in the manœuvres of his republican backers, and the democrats who came to the assistance of the minority, has passed into a quiet contemplation of what future movements may developtain Governor Tilden's exact position on the bill. The distinguished gentleman himself could not be induced to express a direct opinion as to its merits or demerits. He is, in fact, opposed to the interviewing process, on the ground that such conversations, given in an official capacity, are beneath the dignity of the Executive. The Governor has also an apparent distaste for thrusting forward his personal opinions frequently before the people, as he abnors the notion of being oracularly consulted on all occasions when public matters come up for analysis. I have talked tot, however, with intimate friends of Governor who are entirely familiar sentiments on the subject of this latest Charter bill; they emphatically allege that Mr. Tilden is opposed to the measure rinciple. He is understood to be against any movement taking the snape of legislation for the enest of one political clique to the advancement of another. In this connection he seeks to plant his opposition to the Costigan bill. If the people by New York city or any other city in want a change in their charter, He favors a general law by which this work can be accomplished. It will be recollected that during the contest on the Costigan bill Mr. Davis, who, no doubt, represented Governor Tilden on the floor of the House at that time, introduced a resolution providing for the appointing of a comssion, consisting of Mr. Charles O'Conor and others, to drait a suitable general law as to the chartering of cities and towns throughout the State. Governor Tilden is, therefore, understood to stand upon the broad platform of general legislation, and special measures, inaugurated for personal objects, will be certain to meet with a prompt veto when brought before him for signature. Thus stands the fight to-day, as are as Governor Timen is concerned. The men who are behind this oil, however, leef confident of its passage, and even go so far as to say that they can put it through over the Governor's veto. Political speculators state that the introduction of such a measure simply means a divistion in layor of Andrew H. Green. It is well known that a very bitter leening exists between has caused decided excitement since the commencement of the session. I am informed to-might that no further steps will be taken in its passage until bext week. If the statements made to me from reliable sources are true, that Mr. Tiden is opposed to the bill, I cannot see much chance for its passage.

THE LORBY.

An active loubly, however, could accomplish a great deal. If influence of future patronage and emolument were brought into play but singut chance of deleat. In my opinion, would exist. The passage of the bill means a thorough upsetting of Tammany field. This is a high card to play for, but then we should have a decided applit in the democratic party and consequently a republican triumph. No such bill could get through the Legislature without sacrificing party fidelity.

tarouga the Legislature without sacrificing party ficelity:

TARMANY HALL TYRANNY.

It is urged, however, in its delence, that Tammany Hall is now not a representative democratic institution, out that centralization and despots rule its councils; that a clique of two or three men parcel out and control all paironage and offices, and that its overthrow, as at present managed, would be beneficial to the democracy and mark the inauguration of a more healthy future. New men would come to the front and the processional pointeran would be compelled to take a back seat. It is an age of outcry for honesty and reform, Men who housted that banner for the past three years are most highly to control the pointice of the future. The hackneyed business politician must suppaided, it is argued that Tammany Hall, rejuvenated, has taken a back track in appointing men to office who lought against their country in a time of need, who are aliens to New York city, and who, when I weed was in power, acred as his close allies. The country democrats are primed effectually with those arguments. It is also casimed that a decided disaffection exists among those gentlemen on the ground of the treatment which they received from New York neutres, as sitting upon decided disaffection exists among those gentlemen on the ground of the treatment which they received from New York members, in sitting upon their suls until all legislation for the metropolishas been attended to. Thus goes the controversy. To hight and next week must bring the contestants to close quarters.

It appears that the bin ordered to-day to a third reading in the Assembly, creating an inspector of Public Works, ought to dispense with all this unecessary riginarcie of investigation. The oill was introduced by Mr. Daly, of New York, some time ago, and made a special order for to-day. It moniers extraordinary powers, and now reads as follows:—

Tweed's case, now pending before the Court of Appeals. Several have asserted, on what they call reliable authority, that a decision will soon be renered in tayor of the fallen chier, by which he will be liberated from Blackwell's Island. As usual with rumpers concerning decisions by that Court before their promutgation, this was a mere windoog of the gossippers.

THE UNDERGROUND TRIEBRAPH BILL.

The hearing before the Assembly Committee on Cities on the Underground Telegraph bill, which was adjourned from last Thursday, was concluded the day. Messrs. Grosvenor P. Lowry, George B. Prescott and Frank L. Pope appeared for the Western Union Company, General Marsail Lefferts. President of the Gold and Stock Company, and E. B. Grant, Vice President of the American District Company, were also present. Mr. Prescott was examined at some length, and gave an interesting account of the European underground and city telegraphic systems, of which he made a carried examination some two years since on behalf of the Western Union Company. General Lefferts explained the system of the effect the proposed change would have upon the peculiar system and instruments employed by that company. All the representatives of the different telegraph company, and the effect the proposed change would have upon the peculiar system and instruments employed by that company. All the representatives of the different telegraph companies were unanimous in the opinion that the effect of a compusory law requiring the wires to be laid underground would be disastrous so far as existing telegraph organizations are concerned, especially to the local communications of New York and Brooklyn, which comprise about seven-eights of the entire mileage of wire in those cities.

RECEPTION OF SPEAKER BLAINE.

Speaker Blaine, who is at present stopping in this city, attended the Union Square Theatre last night in company with Commissioners Perley and Van Cott, and from there proceeded to the fire engine station, Eighteenth street, near Pifth avenue. Upon his arrival an alarm was sprung, and the distinguished visitor shown the men's celerity in turning out at the call of cuty. He complimented the Commissioners and the men upon the highly efficient state of our city Fire Department. Mr. Biaine arrived at the Lincoln Club, No. 12

University place, fiteen minutes before midnight. Quiet, agreeable and elegant was the reception tendered him here. A sumptuous collation was laid out in honor of the guest, after partaking of which Professor Clarke in a few brief and appropriate remarks introduced to the members of the ciub the official mouthplece of the American people.

SPEAKER BLAINE.

In a few well chosen remarks Mr. Blaine expressed his pleasure at meeting the gentlemen of the Lincoln Club, and in substance and that the heroic example of New York republicans is worthy or imitation in all toe other States; which latter, especially those of the East, drew inspiration from the heroic efforts that New York republicans are making sgainst fearful odds. He could not believe that the State would be abandoned to the democrata, whose sympathizers had, ten years ago to-motrow (to-day) laid down had down abandoned to the democrata, whose sympathizers had, ten years ago to-morrow (to-day) laid down incir arms at Appomattox. The speaker had down in contact with many leading democrats in Washington, and, while he did not dread their undertaking a new rebellion, he believed that if they again attained power many issues of the war would nave to be lought over again. But this could not now be possible. Mr. Blaine disclaimed the intention of entering upon a political discussion, and closed his remarks amid a hearty round of appliance. After this a number of toasts were offered and addresses made by various gentlemen around the board.

JOHN MITCHEL.

THE PARADE ABANDONED-FUNEBAL ORATION TO BE DELIVERED IN THE HIPPODROME.

A meeting of the Mitchel Memorial Committee was held last evening at the Northern Hotel to hear the reports of the various sub-committees, appointed at the meeting in Demilt Hall on the previous evening. A committee was also appointed, consisting of T. F. Bourke, O'Donovan Rossa, John Dsvoy, Dr. Henderson and James M. Brann, to wait on prominent Irisa citizens and ask them to act as a committee to receive subscriptions for a national testimodial to Mr. Mitchel's latuny. A committee of three was named to wait upon captain James Mitchel and confer with him on some matters of importance in connection with the demonstration, and various other committees were given charge of special portions of the preparations. speaker and preserving order during the delivery

AH-LU-TE, EMPRESS OF CHINA.

A cable despatch from London, under date of yesterday, says:—Advices from China say that one of the widows of the late Emperor died on the 27th

The death of Ah-lu-te, the young and recently widowed Empress of China, thus announced, may be regarded, so far as the internal peace of the Middle Kingdom is concerned, as rather a fortunate event. She was possessed of considerable strength of character. read. During the brief period that she shared the Dragon throne with Tung-che she exacted from all around her the most unqualified respect and obedience, and gave promise councils or the Empire. The death of her boyish husband, nearly three months since, leaving no issue, complicated the question of the succession in such a manner that the Empress Dowager and the Empress Mother seized the opportunity of recovering the power they lost on majority in 1872. These two old and ambitious ladies succeeded in putting aside Ah-lu-te, who, as it will be seen, was entitled from the Chinese standpoint to become Regent. The result was most mortilying and disheartening to the young standpoint to become Regent. The result was most morthying and disheartening to the young widow, who had a large following among the people, and the treatment she received undoubtedly had the effect of shortening her days in this world.

The Sister of the Moor, came of an unfortunate family. She was the drughter of Chungch, a juntor officer in the Harlin College. He wore the button of the fourth rank, which is equal to that of a prefect of a province. Chungchi is of Mongolian descent and a dannerman of the Plain Blue Banner. He is a son of Said-hanra, who was a noted official at the beginning of the reign of Hen-fung, the late Emproy's father. He lost favor, however, by his landlity to suppriess the Tarping rebenion in 1853. He was degraded, and retired into private life. In 1861 the greater part of his property was confiscated by the government. The father of the late Empress was known as having been the first graduate at the triennial examination for Doctor's degree held in 1862. Thus che had no voice in the selection of his wife and the members of his harem. That business was undertaken for nim by the Empress Dowager and the Empress Mother, the former being the chidless widow of his lather and the latter one of his*concuoines; but the natural mother of the young Emperor Ah-lu-te, as stated, was distinguished for her remarkable intelligence and fair personal appearance. She was caosen by the lemale regents, together with three concubines (one of whom was the aunt of Tung-che), and on the 18th of October, 1872 the marriage solemnity took place, attended with great pomp and spiendor, according to Tartar customs. At that time Ah-ju-te was eighteen years old, having been born in 1854. The Emperor was two years his junior, six seen being the age when majority is reached in China.

MARRIED LIFE.

The young Emperor's married life, it is said, was free from cares. He introduced many reforms and was the first Chinese monarch who received foreign ambassaudors without their going through the degrading ceremony of ko-ton. The Empress took part in deliberations relative to matters of State, and her opinions and advice were regarded with great respect. Among anecdotes told of her is this—that one morning shortly after her marriage she was exhibiting her capability in writing and making quotations from books for her husband, who was greatly pleased with the beauty of the characters she formed. While thus engaged an official amounced breakfast. Turn-her husband, who was greatly pleased what the beauty of the characters she formed. While thus engaged an oilloral announced oreakfast. Turning aside with indignation she demanded why she should be interrupted in the delights of literature by such common place affairs as enting and drinking. Early last January Tung-the was attacked with smallpox, and on the 17th of that month expired.

This was an unexpected event, and brought forward the two ex-Empress Regents, determined to secure a new lease of power. The regular proceeding should be to hominate a child for adoption by young An-lu-te, who would become ex-officio Regent during his minority. One of the grand-sons of the celebrated Prince King was regarded as the most likely candidate. It was necessary in this case that the child should be of a later generation than the deceased Emperor, in order to

It was necessary in this case that the canidatace in the content of the considered themselves in order to make the adoption consisient. But the old empress widows had influence enough to secure the choice of the consin of Tung-che, a said of the same generation, whom they adopted themselves in order to bring him into the direct line. The name of the new Emperor is Tsal-tien, son or Yih Hwan, the Prince of Ch'un, commonly known as the Seventh Prince, being of the Emperor Toakwang. The boy has not yet reached the fourth year of his age. His mother is a sister of the late Emperor's mother, so the latter is aunt from the outset and mother by adoption of the new monarch. Beaddes this, he ascends the throne as a son of Hienfung, the ancient empresses adopting the lad as such on their own and their late husbands' behalf. In this complicated condition of things, which it is rather difficult to unravel, it will be seen that Abjuste was completely put aside, and that the two bold women have carried their point and established themselves in power much in the same daring manner as they did in 1861. The young Empress just deceased took the business very much to heart, and a few days afterward it was rumored that in disgust. She was clearly entitled to adopt a son and immediately become Regent. One of Prince Kung's sons was the natural heir, but this would not suit the ambitious women who coveted supreme authority. Tranquility was not at all assured. It was tought possible Ahluse might bear a son, who would become the centre of a powerful and aggressive lection, and the great Chinese mandarin, hi-Hunz-Chang, it was well understood-only waited the opportunity of a Tartar dynastic quarrei to rise and oy force of arms seize the reas of government nimself.

THE SEVENTH SON

SHE HAD COMMITTED SUICIDE
